The nonprofit group EveryoneEatz recently honored the Plano Police Department during a 9/11 first responder appreciation event at In-Fretta Pizza.

EveryoneEatz has provided 387,500 free meals to area residents since the pandemic began in March, according to organizers.

The organization, founded by In-Fretta Pizza owner Ram Mehta, has also provided more than 50,000 face masks and other personal protective equipment, along with free COVID-19 tests for more than 5,000 people.

“EveryoneEatz provides food distribution, health services, and most importantly hope and support to anyone in need,” the group’s website says.

About 30 people attended the appreciation event, including officers from area police departments and several elected officials.

Here’s what you need to

“In-Fretta and EveryoneEatz provided delicious pizza, wings and salads for all who were hungry,” the Plano department wrote in a Facebook post.

Mehta has previously said that his restaurant has a policy of providing a fresh meal to anyone in need, regardless of their circumstances. After the pandemic hit, he recognized the growing need and that some area residents could no longer afford food and other basic necessities.

More information on EveryoneEatz can be found at everyoneeatz.org.
